

ABSTRACT

The present invention is a method for the use of particles made up of nucleotides or fragments of base groups of DNA and RNA molecules herein referred to as synthetic nucleounits which can be used as recognition molecules with specificity and sensitivity significantly greater than that of antibodies which are used in clinical diagnostics, biotechnology, and research.

